

North East Victoria: How you can be involved in the RFA

Participation is central to the success of Regional Forest Agreements.

From the beginning of the process to the development of the final RFA, all interested stakeholder groups and members of the general public are encouraged to be involved through:

- regional public meetings at key stages of the RFA process;
- community surveys, workshops and case studies;
- public submissions on the directions paper, which will be widely circulated for another consultation period;
- Commonwealth assistance towards the cost of participation in RFAs by peak stakeholder groups and smaller regional interest groups.
